

Bonnie Ashley
<bonnie.j.ashley@gmail.com>

To tori.Klein@unlv.edu, christian.hardigree@unlv.edu,
william.boldt@unlv.edu

cc

12/08/2008 09:46 AM

bcc

Subject Christmas Parties at the house

History: This message has been forwarded.

Good Monday morning, all;
Not all of this email will apply to all of you, but you are the group that needs to know what is going on.
I have requested since last Wednesday for updated guest attendee lists...and to date have still not received these. I MUST RECEIVE THESE WITHIN THE HOUR.
Imagine my shock and dismay when I attended a holiday party on Sunday evening, and one of my invited guests informed me they had set aside the wrong date for our party as they had received an incorrect invitation, but then had to change their plans as they were later called and told, sorry, the invitation was for the wrong date. They then checked with someone else and they told them, no, that's fine...come to any of the parties...and all of this occurring without me knowing the invitation was sent out with the wrong date.
I was NOT informed this occurred, and this may all surprise you, but since I am the one doing the party you MAY HAVE WANTED TO LET ME KNOW you made another error, but what's worse, it was on an invitation with my name on it...and made me look like a fool, as did not knowing about it.
I am going to be very frank, you all are paid way too much for me to have to put up with the constant problems I am dealing with, and it's just wasting my time. I gave up a job to help with this, and I am not only losing $80,000+/yr, but am doing this for nothing.
David is the President of this great university and when represented with inaccuracies so often, makes everyone look foolish. THIS IS NOT OK. What's worse is that you kept it from me. Making the error was one thing, but hiding it from me is quite another and is completely unacceptable behavior.
I want a full and complete update on every aspect of the parties as of right now...including the telephone number to the caterer.
We will all have a meeting in the new year.

Bonnie J Ashley